Adam Riley joins Punter Southall Health & Protection as Director of Global Development

Adam Riley has joined award-winning employee benefits consultancy, Punter Southall Health & Protection in the newly created role of Director of Global Development. Adam has extensive UK and international corporate employee benefits and pensions experience, having previously held senior roles at Friends Provident, Portus and most recently Aon.

Riley will lead the business development activity within the global and UK corporate benefits business. He will work with US and International organisations that require independent corporate benefits advice and consultancy for their UK operations. He will also be responsible for ensuring that Punter Southall Health & Protection's range of services and propositions meets the needs of today's UK and global employers.

Adam said "I'm delighted to join the Punter Southall Health & Protection team at such an exciting time in its development. The world of global employee benefits has changed significantly. Modern and progressive employers are focused more than ever before on providing benefits that truly support their employees' health and wellbeing."

John Dean, Chief Commercial Officer said: "We are delighted to welcome Adam to the team. He brings with him a wealth of experience and is uniquely placed to develop our international benefits proposition. And as we prepare to join the Howden family, this is a key area of growth for the business. "
